Our Seminar Speaker

Mark Handler

Mr. Handler is a US Navy Submarine Service veteran and polygraph examiner as well as former Narcotics and Special Crimes Agent; Deputy Sheriff, Law Enforcement Officer and contractor in the intelligence field. He has extensive experience and specialized training in polygraph, interviewing, interrogation, and vulnerability assessment. Mr. Handler holds an Associate's degree in Natural Sciences and several certificates in Police officer training and has extensive investigative and foreign language training. He has conducted quality control of countless polygraph examinations, interviews, interrogations and investigations for private and law enforcement agencies. Mr. Handler has authored and co-authored several polygraph - related articles, and has traveled throughout the world as a much sought-after presenter on various polygraph topics.

This is a course developed for new, experienced or supervising police investigators. It focuses on the most current research and defensible strategies for soliciting information and detecting lies. The course includes a comprehensive review and discussion of investigative interviewing that follows the conversation management approach and the P.E.A.C.E. model taught in the United Kingdom based on the text Investigative Interviewing: The Conversation Management Approach. That book provides knowledge, understanding, and tools to help maximize disclosure and achieve investigative objectives. The training includes an introduction to human memory, including reasonable expectations and limitations for witnesses and suspects. This is followed by review of ethical interrogation strategies designed to foster genuine admissions and confessions. Discussions of low-risk and high-risk strategies are included to raise awareness of the benefits and potential liability of each. The course also touches on avoiding false confessions and defending against claims of false confessions.
